

Schwob, Marcel

Viaje a Samoa

Seduced by the work and the adventurous life of Stevenson,

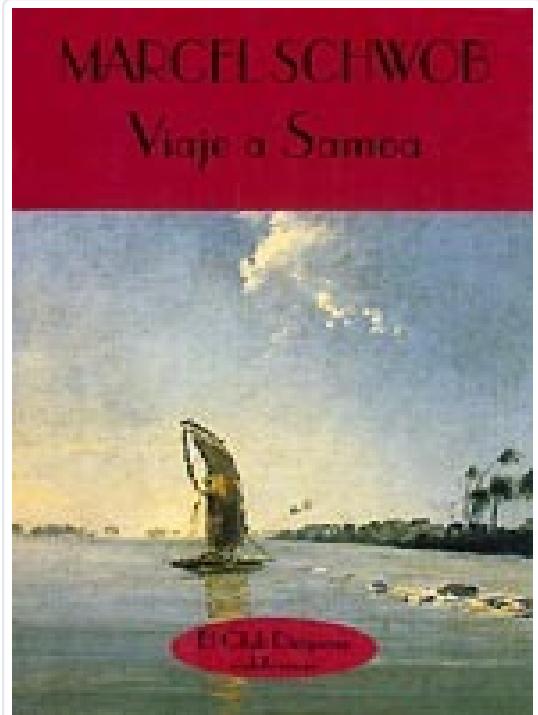

Schwob

(Chaville, 1867 - Paris, 1905), author of cult status to which we owe rare masterpieces such as Vidas Imaginarias

or the book of Monelle, commits in 1901 the greatest madness of his life: ignoring his delicate state of health, he embarks in company of his inseparable companion Ting, in the ship «Ville de la Ciotat»

rumble to Samoa! He then begins a correspondence continuous -as if it were a savior's thread of Ariadne, as an intimate diary on board -with his beloved Marguerite and in her relates the peripetys, anecdotes and difficulties of the crossing and describes the changing landscapes exotic that he discovers at each step along that tortuous and exhausting voyage by sea to the antipodes.
